

The bill beginning Sunday night, November 22, at this popular vaudeville theatre, is one of the best of the season. The program is as follows:

Mr. George L. Wade, the well known minstrel man who has made thousands laugh in his black face work in his own company is the leading attraction at the Alhambra theatre this week, and he measures up to every expectation. Mr. Wade is assisted by Miss Wall in a sketch which displays Mr. Wade's talent to the best advantage. He appears in the character of an old negro woman while Miss Wall is presented as a dainty and very bewitching young girl. She is a pretty woman, and sustains her share of the sketch with much credit. The act gives Mr. Wade opportunity to work far and wide and from the time he comes on with that infectious laugh until the curtain goes down he keeps the audience in an uproar. His laugh is a feature, but the stuff he works and the remarkable facial expressions would make a tombstone wrinkle with merriment.

That beautiful illustrated song, "Wish me good luck on my journey," will be sung this week. A very pretty set of slides accompany this song, which adds much to its beauty.

Marilou and Rosalie make a very clever sister team who dance and sing in costume. They come first as automobile girls with an appropriate song and change quickly to attractive Dutch girls in wooden shoes. They close with solo dancing and a dance in unison which establishes them as very talented dancers.

Mr. Jack O'Dell and Miss Grace Gilmore have a very substantial sketch, which mixes wholesome fun with a true pathetic tone, and includes some well arranged slang. Miss Gilmore is very good in the character of a news girl, and the plot works out very satisfactorily. In the meantime the sketch gives Mr. O'Dell an opportunity to sing a very effective song in a good baritone voice and Miss Gilmore also sings, and they conclude with a duet.

Altogether the bill this week

Alhambra theatre has been running.

The Alhambroscope will show two new animated pictures this week. Two performances this week, beginning at 8:15 and at 9:20. Admission, 10c. Reserved seats, 10c extra.
